The diagram illustrates a television system architecture. It features three main components in a vertical stack: a SET-TOP BOX (labeled 50), a VIDEO CASSETTE RECORDER (labeled 54), and a TELEVISION (labeled 58). These components are interconnected by a central vertical line with downward-pointing arrows, indicating a signal path from the Set-Top Box to the VCR, and then to the Television. A fourth component, a REMOTE CONTROL (labeled 60), is positioned to the right of the other three. It contains a sub-component labeled 62, which is a box labeled 'BUTTONS'. Wavy arrows point from the Remote Control towards each of the three main components (Set-Top Box, VCR, and Television), indicating that the remote control is used to operate all three devices. A double-headed vertical arrow labeled 48 is positioned above the Set-Top Box, suggesting a bidirectional connection or a specific signal path to or from the top of the box.

A hand-drawn sketch of a search interface. At the top, the text "SEARCH ARCHIVES" is written in large, capital letters. Below this, the word "TRACK" is on the left, and "HORSE" is below it. To the right of "TRACK" is a rectangular input field containing the word "AQUEDUCT". Below "HORSE" is another rectangular input field containing a series of dashes. Below "TRACK CONDITIONS" is a third rectangular input field, also containing dashes. At the bottom center is a rectangular button labeled "SUBMIT". To the left of the "SUBMIT" button is the number "3004" with an arrow pointing towards it. To the right of the "SUBMIT" button is the number "3604" with an arrow pointing towards it. Above the "AQUEDUCT" field is the number "3602" with an arrow pointing to it. Above the "SUBMIT" button is the number "3600" with an arrow pointing to it. To the right of the "AQUEDUCT" field is the number "706" with an arrow pointing to it. The entire sketch is enclosed in a hand-drawn rectangular border.
